

60-SECONDS WITH:

ADAM FELLOWS, ASSOCIATE, STEPHENSON HARWOOD

Q What is your key area of practice?

A My work is primarily personal tax advice, with a strong focus on international clients both with or looking to have a presence in the UK.

Q What are you most going to focus on in the next 12 months?

A Taking advantage of seeing people in person, especially going to meetings to learn the tricks of the trade.

Q What do you see as the biggest upcoming challenge you face as a practitioner?

A The increasing regimes of transparency and compliance. Sometimes they can overwhelm the actual legal advice.

Q Why did you choose to attend TL4 x ConTrA's Private Client Summer School and what did you achieve from attending?

A It was one of the first events I could attend. I got to meet a lot of new people which has been ... challenging over the last 18 months.

Q How did it feel to be back at a physical event?

A Brilliant, and the set up was perfect. You could almost forget what has been going on.

Q What was your key takeaway from any one of the sessions at Private Client Summer School over the 2 days?

A Mine was about the importance of working with trustees and intermediaries to effect what is best for the client, not just what they want. Don't think I ever learned where the fire meeting point was though.

Q What would you say to people thinking of attending one of our summer schools in the future?

A Do it! A great chance to get up to speed on new law, learn some top tips and mix with your peers in a relaxed environment.

Q What does the perfect weekend look like?

A It really depends on how busy my week has been, though at the moment I am trying to catch up with people as much as possible. Can't go wrong with a pub lunch by a fire on a dreary day though.

Q What is the one thing you could not live without?

A My glasses. Boring but practical. I need to read a lot for my job.

Q Who would you most like to invite to a dinner party?

A Nigella Lawson – if she offers to cook...
